Week1_HTMLFundamentals | Week1_Reflection

In this first laboratory activity, I learned the basics of setting up an HTML file and running it inside Visual Studio Code. I understood how the fundamental document structure works, including essential tags like headings and paragraphs. At first, I had trouble with proper file naming and opening the live file correctly in the browser. I solved this by checking the file path carefully and using the browser preview properly. As an improvement, I refined my workspace structure and organized my tags so that the code is cleaner and easier to read. Overall, this activity gave me a good starting point for the rest of our web development lessons.
